CENG320 Lab 2

This lab period consisted of me typing in the code for three "Hello World" programs, as well as linking them and running the executables. This gave me great practice with VIM and also allowed me to work on my assembly syntax through typing the code in and attempting to understand it as I did. I did encounter an error with a library not being found, as it seemed most people in class did, but I did finish the code for the corresponding file. Both files which I could run ran perfectly fine. I did encounter an error with a misplaced period, but I got it sorted out quickly.
